1.13 Screen 7 – Weekly Earnings Verification

The Earnings Verification exchange is designed so states may specify the earnings information (wages, tips, commission, bonus, vacation, sick leave, holiday, severance, and wages in lieu), and associated dates (date paid, date allocated, or no date required) they wish to collect. The state sets indicators in each wage request record, which instruct the E-Response to display the particular earnings information data entry field(s). Below is a screen shot illustrating the case where a state requested all earnings information and date paid for holiday data, and date allocated for wages in lieu. On a request-by-request basis, states may request the collection of any combination of data (earnings types and dates) from employers or TPAs.

1.14 Screen 8 - Additional Earnings Verification Information

The Additional Earnings Verification Information screen can be controlled by the state UI agency. In particular, each wage request record has an indicator, set by the state that tells the E-Response to display or suppress the additional earnings verification information screen (see below). Suppressing entry of additional earnings verification information permits states to maximize automation and avoid manual review of additional information. For employers / TPAs that use web services, the indicator will be read by the business rules, and SIDES will either accept or reject additional earnings verification information accordingly. The screen also displays state comments to the employer.
